

ROCA CAPE | Bus Route

403

Well-known for being the westernmost point of the European Continent, Roca Cape is in the extreme point of Sintra Mountain Range, sweeping over the Atlantic Ocean, having been described by Luis de Camões as the place "where the land ends and the sea begins". At 165 metres above sea level there is a lighthouse, which was built in 1758 and is 22 metres high and the light of which reaches a radius of 48 kilometres.

HELL'S MOUTH | Bus Route

427

Located in the west coast of the Cascais village, Hell's Mouth was a cave, the exuberance of which results from its natural beauty as well as the raging sea. The name given to it is due to the morphologic analogy and the tremendous and frightening crashing of the waves that you feel when you are there, a white foam rising dozens of metres high.

CASCAIS MARINA | Bus Route

427

Famous for being the stage for big international water sports events, the Cascais Marina is a recreation port with 650 moorings, which allow vessels of up to 45 metres. Here there are also shops, bars and restaurants surrounded by pedestrian areas. In August 2012, it also started receiving cruises, becoming a stopover for luxury ocean liners on international voyages.

CASCAIS CITADEL | Bus Route

427

The Cascais Citadel, located on the right bank of the Tagus river, started as a military fortress that included the Our Lady of Light Fortress and Saint Anthony Tower, built in the reign of John II of Portugal, the function of which was to defend the coast. It was recently restored and it now has the Museum Palace of the Citadel and the Cascais Guesthouse there, as well as shopping and restaurant areas.

SAINT MARTHA LIGHTHOUSE | Bus Route

427

The Saint Martha Lighthouse is one of the oldest in the municipality and it had an important role in terms of keeping Cascais safe and guiding boats to dry land. Besides its role of signalling the coast and after an architectural intervention by Francisco and Manuel Aires de Mateus it now has a museum dedicated to the five centuries of portuguese lighthouses, thus being an unprecedented model in Portugal.

PAULA REGO HOUSE OF STORIES | Bus Route

427

Inaugurated in September 2009, the Paula Rego House of Stories aims to make known the works of the artist by carrying out one permanent and two temporary exhibitions per year. Composed of various bodies and surrounded by trees, the building was designed by the architect Eduardo Souto de Moura, who won the Secil Architecture Prize in 2011.

GUIDE HOUSE | Bus Route

415

427

The Guide House is a unique place, of unrivalled beauty, with a great variety of attractions and perfect for shopping, meals or simply for a time of relaxation, with shops, restaurants and outdoor sitting areas surrounded by green areas and the most amazing view of the Cascais coast sea. The Alcáçovas Counts Manor House -original name - still has its emblematic small palace from the 17th century, which has been totally restored.

QUEEN'S BEACH | Bus Route

427

The Queen's beach is a small beautiful beach with calm sea that is discreet and hidden, nestled between cliffs, right in the centre of Cascais and it has outdoor sitting areas and a lookout terrace. Its name is due to Queen D. Amélia, who bathed there during the royal family visits to Cascais.

PRESENTATION

Once an elegant summer retreat for the Portuguese monarchy during the 19th century and a safe haven for European royalty during the Second World War, as time went on, Cascais became an important cultural centre, whilst still maintaining an air of aristocracy.

Well-known for its splendid white sand beaches, many shops and charming shopping streets and its cosmopolitanism, the Cascais fishing village reinvented itself and became a refined seaside resort and one of the most sophisticated destinations in the Lisbon area.
